An Immense Crowd at Greeneville. The Whole Written up by a Spicy

MR. EDITOR: The final gasp of the moribun i democracy of this county was begun to-day, that is, the last exhibition of Bob to-day, and as there is hardly a doubt of his considered the beginning of the endit of sham democracy here, and of Bob himself. He has played low farce during the whole canvass with so much success that, had it been played in a district where theaters abound, he would surely by this time have been able to command a respectable salary behind the footlights or on the tanbark in the circus ring, dressed in motley. But it must be confessed that intelligent voters have not been specially edified to see their member of congress play the mountebank, and unless all signs fail us, this district is not again in danger of being misrepresented

The meeting of to-day was very large, as you are perhaps aware. The discussions be ween the two candidates, Pettibone and l'aylor, have been jointly conducted. Early in the day citizens began to crowd our ordinarily quiet town. Badges bearing the names of extibone or Taylor were ex hibited on the hats of men and boys, and even women in large numbers had their headgear similarly decorated. The town was literally alive with the yeomenry of the county. Soon after dinner time the throng, with one accord, moved toward the spot where ex-President Johnson's remains lie, and in the shade of a few trees near the road, a multitude which must have exceeded fifteen hun red per sons assembled, those nearest the speaker' stand sitting on the grass, and those more di-tant standing. The position of the speakers was at the bottom of a gentle declivity, on which the audience was gathered, and which, sloping all sides towards the speakers, placed them nearly in the centre of a vast and picturesque amphitheatre. The place coosen for the meeting was admirable, and but for rather too much wind, all the circumstances were favorable. Mr. Pettibone spoke first, and for an hour gave a hi tory of the doings or the republican party, which was not only true. out most forcibly and enquently spoken. He spoke with the air of a man thoroughly believing what he said, and thoroughly knowing how to say it, and to make others believe it. He read from the democratic platforms laid down in 1872, 1876 and 1880. He illustrated the inconsistency of the democratic party on the great questions of public policy, arraigned that party for its course in congress, and traced the political history of Boo Taylor in lines that would have made his cheek tingle with shame, had not his truckling to the party whip already made him callous to all sense of propriety and consistency. Mr. Pettibone called to the recollection of the audience the p omises of l'aylor when he canvassed this district two years, and showed by the ecord how little heed he had paid to them after his e ection.

When Mr. Pettibone had concluded it was difficult to see what Taylor would say. He had been about as thoroughly "done up" as it was possible to conceive, and yet no word of personal abuse had been apoken. Every word of Pettibone's speech had been courteous and dignified in form, and whatever it contained that as offensive, was so, because the record produced showed the ruth of the statements made. But among Bob's qualifications for public speaking he has that of story telling, and though his stories on this occasion did not illustrate the situation at all, and might as well have been told at the circus by the fellow with parti-colored apparel, known par ex ellence as "the clown," they nevertheless made the boys laugh and shout ran for Bob Taylor." Bob did wisely in not wandering into the fields of a gument or discu-sion of the policies of the two parties; he knew better than to cross swords with such an opponent as Mr. Pettibone in such a contest. He therefore confined himself to gibes and jests, personalities, such as no high bred opponent woul ever think of using, and such poor defense of his own congressional career as the desperare we kness thereof would allow to one so ill prepared to grapple with the questions involved. It is evident to any thinking, intelligent man that in the qualities necessary in a legslator in the coug ess of the United States. Mr. Pettibone is far the superior of his rival, that they do not admit of comparison; and if the returns of the election on Tuesday next fail to show that this is the opinion of the majority of legal voters in this district, not only will your correspondent be very much surprised, but will be compelled to reduce largely his estimate of the intelligence of the voters of the district. If there be any district in the United States that is interested in the continuance of the policy of the republican party in regard to the tariff it is in East Tennessee. Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island could prosperously and profitably continue their manufactu ing industries with a "tariff for revenue" only. East Tennessee, under such a tariff, would see every water wheel and steam engine now used in the manufacture of cotton, wool an iron thrown out of employment It is, therefore, a matter of surprise that East

Tennesseeans should desire to see the en-But there is one other subject on which it may be permitted to express wonder. It is the fact that loyal East Tennesseeans, who, during the late rebellion, were obliged to take refuge from rebel atrocities in the caves and fastnesses of the mountains, and who were frequently hounded from their lurking place by rebel spies and forced into the rebel armies or thrown into rebel prisons, should now be seen working in the same political harness and voting the same ticket with men who made the rebellion; with men who drove these loys alists from their homes into the mountains and hunted them from the mountains into rebel regiments or rebel prisons. Yet such is too frequently the case. Too many who were loyal and fought for the government are now voting to put that government into the hands of the very men who made the war and who boast that they are standing up for the principles of Jeff Davis, Lee and Stonewall Jackson, such is the inconsistency of ignorance. Happy is is it that there is a Providence who watches over nations and who will not permit his great purposes of good to mankind to be overcome by the ignerance of the wicked-

This letter is too long already, but I

The Baily Chronicle. must relate two or three incidents of the day here. One is the fact that a procession of a dozen youths, doubtless inspired by their elders, marched into the meeting with Taylor badges on their hats, and one of them bearing the rebel flag, another that a woman bearing a Taylor badge on her hat also bore a boquet for Bob Taylor in one hand and the rebel flag displayed.

Another noteworthy incident is this: A party of rough looking white men were passing along the street shouting "'rah for Bob Taylor," when a colored man named Andy Johnson shouted, "Hurrab for Pettibone! Whereupon one of the white men, named Campbell, called Andy "a black son of a—" to which Andy replied, "you'r another." This was too much for hivalry to endure, and Campbell seized Andy by the throat and attem; ted to chastise him, but unfortunately for Campbell Andy gave him a very rough handling, and Campbell's friends were very glad to get him away, his head and face dripping with blood. Andy proved his right to the name of his plucky namesake, and got off without a scratch. But Campbell will think twice before he attacks that "nigger" again. X 7. Z. A Wise Deacon. "Deacon Wilder, I want you to tell me how you ket t yourself and family well the part season, when all the rest of us have been sick so much, and have had the dectors visiting us so often."

"Brc. Taylor, the answer is very easy, I used Hop Bitters in time; Taylor's zeal for his democratic masters kepf my family well and saved the and for Bob's re-election, was made here doctor bills. Three dollars' worth of it kept us well and able to work all the defeat on Tuesday next, this may be fairly time. I'll warrant it has cost you and the neighbors one to two hundred dollars apiece to keep sick the same time." "Deacon, I'll use your medicine
